

Five SJSU football players cited for trashing dormitory

By Randy Paige
Staff Writer

Five members of the SJSU football team reportedly trashed their dormitory after the game Saturday night and four were taken to county jail. They were booked on charges of vandalism and disturbing the peace, according to University Police Sgt. William Lane.

According to witnesses, Phillip Steven Moore, 21, a center for the Spartans; David James Albright, 21, a linebacker; Thomas Wilbur Larson, 20, an offensive guard; Henry Jerome Ramelli, 21, an offensive tackle; and Ken Delgado, 20, an offensive guard, tossed beer bottles out of a room on the third floor of Allen Hall, breaking a street light.

Larson is the only starter among the five. Albright, Ramelli, and Delgado all are redshirts and, as such, have not played a single down for the Spartans all season.

All but Delgado were taken to county jail. Delgado had recently undergone surgery which made his physical condition unsuitable for admittance to the jail, Lane said.

University police were called to Allen Hall at 4:50 a.m. Sunday by a resident assistant there who said a disturbance was taking place on the third floor, police said.

Resident Adviser Kevin Gross went to the third floor to investigate the disturbance and found the five football players coming out of a dorm room, police said. The group proceeded down the hallway, punched and broke an exit sign and tore material off a bulletin board as they headed for another room on the second floor, according to police reports.

A shouting match ensued between dorm officials and the football players as police were called to the scene.

Police informed Gross that they would not be able to take the five students into custody unless Gross was willing to make a citizen's arrest.

An officer is not allowed to arrest an individual who has committed a misdemeanor unless the crime is committed in the officer's presence. A citizen must arrest the individual in order to allow police to take custody.

Gross made the citizen's arrest and the five were cited on charges of vandalism and disturbing the peace.

Four of the five were taken to County Jail and later released on their own recognizance. Delgado was cited and released.

Wahlquist Library to house Mexican-American Center

By Lida Ojo
Staff Writer

"A source of pride for the Chicano students and the community," the Chicano Resource Center, to be housed in the old John Wahlquist Library, is to open next spring.

The purpose of the center is to provide a site for all students to research and study the Chicano experience, according to Reyes Ortega, student member of the Committee on the Chicano Resource Center.

The committee met last week to work out details of the center's March 1982 opening.

Of concern now is finding an exact location for the center, acquiring more materials and compiling a comprehensive Hispanic bibliography.

A 1980 budget for Mexican-American and Chicano Resource Center material totaled $15,000, according to Maureen Pastine, library director and committee chair.

A total of $7,000 went for the purchase of duplicate materials that are already kept in the regular library. These materials will be available for use at the center, Pastine said.

An additional $8,000 was spent on Hispanic materials that can be checked out at SJSU's regular library, she added.

"The materials already in the regular library system will not be taken up and placed in the Chicano Resource Center," said Jeff Paul, acting center coordinator.

He said although the materials will be compiled in a comprehensive bibliography and cataloged together, students may need to search the regular library shelves for Hispanic information.

"Materials for the center have been coming in at the rate of two to six items per day," Paul said. He said about 300 cataloged materials, primarily books, are available for use and can be found in the north wing on the second floor of the Wahlquist Library.

Paul said he would continue to order printed material and begin to stock microfilm should a microreader be bought for the center.

Jeff Paul shows Arturo Cabrera, acting chairman of the Mexican-American graduate studies, a list of new books which will become part of the Chicano Resource Center.

Although the microfilm is cheaper, the committee agreed to postpone discussion of ordering a microreader, until the center's two-year evaluation period is up, Pastine said.

Ortega said for two years Chicano students have collected books and other materials for the center. He said that the collection will be presented after the center's opening.

Ortega proposed the painting and hanging of a mural for the pillars of the center. He said the art would be painted by non-professional students, faculty and staff under the direction of a local Chicano artist.

The committee agreed that the subject be discussed with the artist at the next meeting when permission for the campus planning committee is secured.

Materials to be housed in the Chicano Resource Center are related to the Chicano experience, Paul said, but, about 25 percent of the material will relate to other Hispanics.

The next Chicano Resource Center committee meeting is scheduled for 9 a.m. Dec. 10. The meeting will be opened to visitors, Pastine said.

Earth Toys awaits decision on autonomy

By Cindy Bundock
Staff Writer

Earth Toys, a campus sports equipment rental shop, is facing a predicament called the "Earth Toys dichotomy," according to manager Victor Jones.

Jones presented the A.S. Board of Directors with the problem of whether Earth Toys should become self-sufficient or provide inexpensive services.

"There is a fine line between being self-sustaining and providing inexpensive service," Jones said. "I think it's up for you to decide what you want to do with Earth Toys."

"My personal feeling is that it should be kept at a breaking point. It would be an injustice to the students if we started making a profit."

Penny Terry, director of sponsored programs and services, supervises Jones in the management of Earth Toys.

"I think this year is a year for you guys to make some choices about this shop," she said to the board.

Board member Jim Rowen said he would like for Earth Toys to be sustaining.

"I don't think with the resources, they can," he said.

Earth Toys is open from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. It rents out downhill and cross-country skis, boots and poles, ski racks and sleeping bags.

Equipment the shop rents includes ice chests, backpacks, camp stoves and tents.

To be self-sustaining, Earth Toys needs more space to expand, Jones said. The shop needs 250 pairs of skis instead of the 170 pairs it has in order to generate enough income to become self-sustaining.

He said, however, there is no space to store the needed skis.

Jones said he and Terry will discuss ways to expand.

Rowen said within the next couple of years, the board will have to decide on whether to have Earth Toys be self-sustaining.

He said the rental shop could be both inexpensive and self-sustaining.

"I think they can strive toward self-sufficiency and still provide inexpensive service," A.S. Controller Angela Osborne said.

Osborne said its services and prices were very inexpensive as compared to outside shops. She said she had not gone through the books to see if Earth Toys could charge higher prices.

"It's too early to tell," she said.

"We're not trying to run a Mel Cotton's or Oshman's," said board member Clark Meadows. "We're running an organization generated toward students, and students benefit from it."

"There is hardly any group in the budget which generates funds in order to be self-sufficient."

Earth Toys' income this semester is $6,990. If there is a 20-week ski season and the shop rents 80 percent of its equipment, it would generate $28,000, according to Jones.

Jones said the shop has served approximately 1,000 persons this semester. He said the amount includes about 350 paying customers, the remainder being customers with questions.

A $13 million mistake

The proposed $13 million Recreation and Events Center A.S. Tony Robinson has been pushing for all semester is an idea that will just not work.

The proposed center is 10 years too late, too small, not feasible for the proposed location and would be a burden the SJSU student body should not be forced to bear for the next 25 years.

The idea, which will go before the students as a referendum in February pending an okay from the Chancellor's office, calls for a 7,500 to 10,000-seat arena primarily for basketball and concerts.

The building complex would also house other game courts, a weight and body conditioning room, dressing rooms, and a separate swimming and diving facility.

The plans call for the center to be located between Joe West Hall and the Music Building. It would be a satellite of the Student Union, financed through student fees. The proposed REC referendum calls for a fee increase of $10 each semester for the next two years and $40 each semester for the following 23 years to finance the project.

The student body should not be forced to carry this burden. With rising student fees, the possibility of tuition and budget cuts, students are already being forced to meet increased costs.

The idea for a recreation center in San Jose is good but it should be undertaken by the city, county or private developers.

Regardless of what proponents say, there is no question the ultimate goal of the project is to give the Spartan basketball team a home. Nothing, however, prevents them for playing at a city or privately-owned facility.

Furthermore, the proposed plans for the REC are inadequate. There is simply not enough room to house such a large facility in the proposed area. Simply, the idea of parking for the facility is overwhelming.

The planned facility is also too small. If Tony Robinson is dreaming of a center, why not dream big? A 7,500-seat facility would not attract revenue-generating professional athletics nor could such a facility compete for large concerts with more spacious facilities just up the peninsula.

We agree with Robinson that a recreation center is a good idea, but his plan is 10 years too late. With budgets being cut from every direction and education programs suffering, now is not the time to spend money for recreation.

The proposal should be laid to rest before anymore money is spent on consultants and blueprints. Passage of this inadequate proposal would be a $13 million mistake.

Balanced policy or rape and ruin?

Will the real James Watt stand up?

James Watt. Some say "He's bringing much needed balance" to the Department of Interior; others say he's a political liability who will "rape and ruin the nation."

But is he really a "butcher" who would have a Smokey the Bear rug before the fireplace and Bambi's stuffed head on the wall of his office?

We all enjoy the sight of crashing waves without drilling rigs on the horizon and most of us would prefer to picnic on a green, spacious parkland rather than a concrete lot.

Unfortunately, for us, and Watt, many statements he's made have either been taken out of context, misconstrued or exaggerated.

When we're told one man, the Secretary of Interior, plans to turn our "America the Beautiful" into a barren wasteland, we become frustrated, angered and ready to fight.

Yet, what seems even more frustrating is being fed half-truths and not knowing where Watt actually stands.

We'll, it's time to look at the facts.

First of all, Watt's job is to oversee one-third of the land in the United States, some 762 million acres. He administers 300 national parks, 400 wildlife refuges and wilderness areas.

He also manages the Bureau of Reclamation, which builds dams and other irrigation projects that provide water for the West.

He enforces the strip-mining law, leases oil rights on the one billion acres of the Outer Continental Shelf and regulates the mineral rights on about 190 million acres of national forest.

Prior to Watt, the department was run by environmentalists who acquired new federal parklands, slapped severe restrictions on mining, and oil and gas drilling, while also emphasizing the importance of saving various endangered species.

Watt said, "My early action may have appeared to be pro-development, but that was because we were trying to swing the pendulum back to the middle ground" (between unrestricted development and unbridled conservation.)

What exactly were his actions?

to allow drilling for oil or gas, hardrock mineral or logging in the national parks."

It has been reported that Watt has compiled a "hit list" of national parks and refuges.

Watt, though, has requested a 225 percent increase in park funds to improve the condition of the national parklands.

It's claimed that Watt has there is a Biblical order to rape the environment."

These comments are based on the following quote given by Watt when asked if we should leave some scenic resources for our children, "Absolutely... the Secretary of Interior must have, to be steward for the natural resources for this generation as well as future generations. I do not know how many future generations we can count on before the Lord returns. Whatever it is, we have to manage with a skill to have the resources needed for future generations."

But what if Watt really is "the Darth Vader of the environment?"

At present, the only alternative is to replace him. That's not a viable solution.

A Christian organization contemplated a resolution demanding the removal of Watt. Soon after they dropped the idea.

One member, Elenie Houszagh, said, "We couldn't be sure his replacement would be any different. The removal of one individual would not solve this problem. What is needed is a redirection of our commitments and priorities in the area of resources."

The force is with us.

Watt's job is to oversee one-third of the land in the United States.

Many environmental groups claim Watt plans to overturn the laws protecting the environment. Yet environmental laws are still being carried out with Watt stating it's "industry's responsibility to not only observe the rules but search for new and better ways to protect the environment."

It has been charged that Watt will allow oil and gas drilling and logging in national parks.

In May, Watt said he "never intended to change, nor will he ask Congress to change the law in order pushed for budget cuts as a "back door" approach to eliminate the Endangered Species Program.

As part of Reagan's administration budget cuts, the Endangered Species Program has been trimmed, yet Watt has "ordered" his department to implement the Endangered Species Act, adding, "preventing the extinction of wildlife and plants is important."

Regarding Watt's Christian views, (he was "born again" in 1964) it is said his "devout reading of the Scriptures have led him to believe support a film series that achieves this goal so well.

What constitutes a nuclear 'win'?

Editor:

I am writing in reference to an argument between two opposing viewpoints regarding the issue of whether or not it is possible to win a nuclear war.

In his letter "Nuclear war is winnable," R. P. Schell argued that it is, indeed, possible to win a nuclear war via a preemptive attack. In "No winner in nuclear exchange," Steve Whitlatch argued in his letter that in the event of a nuclear exchange, no winner would exist.

The arguments given by these gentlemen confuse the issue because they neglected to define one critical word: "win." What constitutes a "win?"

AWACS deal helps Iraq

Editor:

The AWACS deal seemed a horrendous and manipulative act to many of us, and especially to Israel. Yet, Saudi Arabia has been a transit path for the movement of U.S. weaponry to Iraq.

Part of the AWACS package includes the sale of F15 long-range gas tanks and side-winder missiles. No doubt many of these items will also be forwarded to Iraq. What does Iraq do with them?

'Credit is due' film chairman

Editor:

Recently, the Spartan Daily reported on the many problems plaguing the ASPB film series. It is unfortunate that poor facilities and faulty equipment have damaged the reputation of such a fine series. Hopefully, such articles will bring pressure to bear on the powers that be to make the necessary improvements.

Despite these problems, credit is due to films chairman Kevin Johnson for his hard work in providing a program of films that surpasses any offered in recent years on this campus. Mr. Johnson has expanded the series to include documentary, foreign and "classic" older films. The series has grown from one night per week to three and now offers matinee showings. While many of these additions may not be cost-efficient at present, attendance has indicated a "market" for such films. Like most new programs, attendance should grow in time.

It is important that the ASPB offer programming to meet the diverse needs of the campus community. I hope that they continue to

Fullerton State falls

SJSU wins Titan struggle

By Michael Liedtke
Staff Writer

SJSU's volleyball team gave its fans five again last Friday night in the Women's Gym.

For the second straight time at home, the Lady Spartans won the first two games of a best-of-five match, then dropped the next two before rebounding to take the decisive game of the contest in an impressive fashion.

Last Tuesday night, the opponent was Fresno State; last Friday, the victim was Fullerton State in SJSU's topsy-turvy 15-11, 15-4, 4-15, 6-15, 15-4 SJSU victory.

With their fourth straight victory, the Lady Spartans are now 14-15 overall and have a chance of finishing the season at the .500 mark.

In order to do so, SJSU will have to knock off Northern California Athletic Conference rival Stanford in its season finale tomorrow night in the Men's Gym. That won't be an easy feat because Stanford has been ranked among the NCAA's Top 10 all year.

The Lady Spartans' match against Fullerton State was moved from the Men's Gym, the usual site of the team's matches, to the Women's Gym due to a blackout in the Men's Gym.

The last-minute change of scenery didn't seem to bother SJSU in the first two games of the match as they disposed of the Lady Titans handily.

But then disaster struck.

Fullerton State scored 15 of the last 16 points to embarrass the Lady Spartans 15-4 in the third game and then proceeded to tally 10 of the final 12 points in the fourth game

Toledo can clinch MAC title, California Bowl berth with win

Toledo shut out Kent State 17-0 last Saturday to come within one game of winning the Mid-American Conference title and the right to play SJSU in the California Bowl on Dec. 19 in Fresno.

The Rockets, 7-1 in MAC play on the year, can control their own destiny in post-season play by beating Northern Illinois in DeKalb on Saturday.

If Toledo wins, they will go to the California Bowl. But, if Northern Illinois wins, the MAC champion will be Miami, Ohio.

Miami defeated Northern Illinois 30-3 last Saturday to close out their MAC season with a 6-1-1 mark. The Redskins will take on non-league opponent Cincinnati on Saturday.

Tickets to the California Bowl are available for $15 at the Athletic Ticket Office in the Men's Gym.

SJSU is allotted "as many tickets as we can sell," Sports Information Director Lawrence Fan said.

Chuck Carson, director of information for the California Bowl, said that approximately 12,000 tickets had been sold so far, including conference allocations.

Bulldog Stadium, where the game will be played, seats 30,000.

"Now that people know one of the teams is playing," Carson said, "ticket sales are going to increase."

"People are also waiting for Fresno State's season to end before getting excited about the next season," he added.

Carson believes that people will come out and support SJSU despite the rivalry over the past two years between the Spartans and Bulldogs.

"It's like if you root for the Dodgers or Giants," Carson said. "When the World Series comes around, you support the National League team because they're from your league."

The game will also be nationally televised by the Mizlou network.

Las Vegas joins PCAA

By Richard de Give
Sports Editor

The University of Nevada-Las Vegas was accepted as a member of the PCAA Friday afternoon during the association's meeting in Santa Barbara.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which was an independent, will be able to compete for league championships in swimming, golf, tennis and wrestling in the spring.

The Rebels will try for the football and basketball championships in the fall of 1982, according to Dennis Farrell, assistant to the commissioner of the PCAA.

Farrell was interviewed during halftime of the SJSU-University of the Pacific football game Saturday night.

The addition of Nevada-Las Vegas brings the league "a step closer to what we want — eight teams in football and 10 in basketball."

The league will have seven teams in football and nine in basketball with the addition of UNLV. League members UC Irvine and UC Santa Barbara do not field football teams.

"We were very impressed with the people at Las Vegas," Farrell said. "And, they will add to the quality of the league."

Farrell noted that Nevada-Las Vegas is ranked in some pre-season basketball polls and that their style of play in football is comparable to that found in the PCAA.

"They throw the ball a lot," he said, "and they should fit in well with the conference."

Nevada-Las Vegas has a 2-1 record against the PCAA this year, having defeated SJSU and Long Beach and lost to Fresno State.

The Rebels were swayed by the opportunity to participate in post-season play in football and basketball.

The PCAA tournament winner gets an automatic seeding into the NCAA tournament.

Scheduling for basketball is a problem, however, Farrell said.

Nine teams are an odd number to work with, he explained, which makes for many mathematical possibilities in scheduling.

He spent ten minutes trying to explain a system of scheduling before taking a wait-and-see attitude.

Gambling will not be a problem either, Farrell said.

"By law, bookies are not allowed to make lines on games involving Las Vegas or Nevada-Reno," he explained.

Cal downs Spartan soccer team 3-1; playoff hopes slim

By Mark J. Tennis
Staff Writer

BERKELEY — It was a typical agony of defeat vs. thrill of victory scene.

On one end of the field, the University of California soccer players were jumping around each other with big smiles on their faces.

On the other side of the field, SJSU's soccer players slowly walked to their bench with blank looks on their faces.

The cause of this scene was Cal's 3-1 victory over the Spartans before 1,000 fans and 50 swooping seagulls Saturday afternoon at Memorial Stadium in Berkeley.

The loss finished the Spartans' schedule at 4-3 in the Pacific Soccer Conference and put their overall mark at 14-4-1. Cal concluded its regular season at 6-1 in league and 13-5-1 overall.

The victory for Cal also elevated the Bears into NCAA playoff contention above the Spartans.

SJSU still has a slim hope for a playoff berth, however, if the playoff selection committee picks more than three teams from the Far West region.

The University of San Francisco, the PSC champion and defending national champion, San Diego State and Cal appear to be the top three. Final selections were not available at press time.

"Our chances certainly are not as good as before," said SJSU coach Julie Menendez about the Spartans' playoff chances. "Cal did real well."

The Spartans began the game on the offensive with their midfielders stealing the ball and setting up shots for the forward line. But those same midfielders were caught off guard eight minutes into the game.

That's when Cal's Brian Bombini broke free from the defense, took a pass from Erik Kopelke, and fired a long shot which went over the head of SJSU's Ryan Moore and into the upper right corner of the net.

"That goal was a real bomb," Menendez said. "He must have hit the ball 30 yards away."

Bombini's goal, unfortunately for the Spartans, was the first of three first-half goals the Bears would score in similar fast-breaking fashion.

The second goal was scored by Conrad Habel when he split the Spartan defense and dribbled a shot past Moore, while the third was knocked in by Dave Gustafson.

In the second half, the Spartans pressed offensively and controlled most of the action, but could only come up with one goal.

Giulio Bernardi scored that goal on a penalty kick 20 minutes into the half on a high shot that barely cleared the outstretched hand of talented Cal goalie, Henry Foulk.

Bernardi's goal was set up when SJSU's Joe Pimentel was tackled in the penalty area. But that was all the Spartans could get against the 6'6" Foulk, who made two diving stops.

"They play fast break and capitalized on their opportunities. We had our chances, but couldn't capitalize," Bernardi said.

"I think we controlled the game, but didn't win it," Menendez commented.

As a result, the Spartans season could be finished.

Fernandez, Green tabbed PCAA's premier players

Two more players from the PCAA champion Spartans were named as the conference's outstanding performers this week.

Wide receiver Mervyn Fernandez was named as the league's outstanding offensive performer and nose guard Jessie Green was recognized as the league's premier defensive player this week.

Fernandez, who caught eight passes for 173 yards in SJSU's title-clinching 40-25 victory over the University of the Pacific Saturday, becomes a fourth Spartan to be named as the PCAA's offensive-player-of-the-week. He joins quarterback Steve Clarkson and wide receiver Tim Kearse, who have each won the plaudit twice, as well as running back Gerald Willhite.

Filling in for the injured Dave Dole, Green had a hand in five of the Spartans' 13 quarterback sacks against Pacific. He joins free safety Ken Thomas and linebacker Damon Kieve as Spartans who have been recognized at the conference's defensive-player-of-the-week.

Holiday at West Hall for homeless children

By Greg Garry
Staff Writer

The holiday season is usually a difficult and lonely time of the year for residents of a children's shelter, but this year promises to be different for some.

Jerry Ross, ninth floor residence adviser at Joe West Hall, served as catalyst for this year's change.

"I was visiting Monterey recently when I saw a group performing for a crowd of children," Ross explained. "The kids in the audience were mesmerized by the performance."

The show gave Ross the idea of doing something similar for children at the Santa Clara County Children's Shelter.

"I approached the manager of Real Characters Inc. (the group whose performance he saw) and asked if they would do a Thanksgiving show," he said.

Since the group charged $350 to perform, Ross then had to find out where to get the money. Help, in the form of $200, came from the San Jose Mercury and Ross received the other $150 from SJSU's housing office.

Thirty children from the shelter, ages two through 14, will attend the show and will have an SJSU student for a chaperone, according to Ross.

Ross said he was amazed by the response the program received from students living at West Hall.

"It's the only program I've suggested that's produced a line of kids wanting to participate," he said. "I have volunteers from people on all the floors of West Hall."

"They will have a Thanksgiving dinner with all the trimmings starting at 5 p.m. in the Dining Commons and then, about an hour later they'll watch the show," he said.

The performance features characters from the old Bullwinkle and Rocky show who perform in various comedy skits, he added.

Marcia Peterson, supervisor for the shelter, described the lives of many of the children who will attend the performance.

"What a lot of them have gone through is basically hell," she said.

Shelter residents include children who have been abandoned, physically abused, left to raise themselves or, in some cases, sexually molested by a parent, she said.

The shelter, which serves as a temporary holding facility, can keep a child for a maximum of one year, according to Peterson.

"We are a protective custody facility although some of the older kids feel they're being punished more than protected," she said.

If a child has been lost and is staying at the shelter, the parent must have a legitimate reason to claim the youngster, Peterson explained.

Some of the children spend so much time at the shelter, they completely adjust to the environment here, she said.

"To a lot of them, this is their home away from home," she said.

To some of the children, this adjustment can work at a disadvantage, Peterson said.

"A lot of the time, they will feel uncomfortable in a foster home because they are used to the shelter," she explained.

The older children at the shelter enjoy being there because of the close peer contact, Peterson added.

The Thanksgiving dinner and show is one way for the children to get their minds off their problems, Peterson said.

"It's good for them to have something to look forward to," she said.

Peterson, who has worked at the shelter 15 years, said she enjoys her work despite its difficulty.

"One reason I've stayed here so long is I live with kids because they're so fresh, honest and loving," she said.

Around Other Campuses . . .

SACRAMENTO - The executive director of California State University at Sacramento's CSUS Foundation was officially fired Nov. 2, the State Hornet reported.

Gil McDowell was suspended without pay Oct. 20, after a brief tenure of 15 days at the post. He was fired after university officials discovered discrepancies in his job application.

McDowell also allegedly spent $1,500 of the foundation's money on personal expenses, such as redecorating his office.

LOS ANGELES - Food service workers at the University of Southern California have asked the California Labor Board to investigate the university's payroll department, according to the Daily Trojan.

Workers are asking for the investigation because of repeated delays in delivery of their checks.

Payroll department personnel said delays may have been caused by the university's new computer system.

IRVINE - Construction of a 308-unit structure for married and graduate student housing began in September at the University of California at Irvine, the New University reported.

The new housing project will be an addition to the existing married and graduate student housing, which has a 16 to 18-month waiting list.

Cost of the project is estimated at $16 million and the university is applying for a $3.5 million federal loan. The projected completion date is September of 1982.

LAWRENCE, Kan. - The University of Kansas is becoming nothing more than a signpost on the road to touring bands, according to the University Daily Kansan.

Low ticket sales and turnouts have caused cancellation of several concerts. And according to the campus Special Events Committee, band promoters are losing interest in the university as a marketplace.

Anti-nuke group hold S.U. vigil

Students for Peace members handed out leaflets in front of the Student Union Friday to memorialize the seventh anniversary of the death of Karen Silkwood.

Silkwood, an employee of the Kerr-McGee plutonium manufacturing plant in Oklahoma, died in a car crash on her way to deliver documents to a New York Times reporter that were supposed to expose safety hazards at the plant.

Anti-nuclear activists mark the date every year with vigils or demonstrations. This year's "vigil" was directed at educating people about nuclear power and Silkwood's death, according to geology sophomore Greg Kartholl.

Two other planned "vigils," one directed at lunch hour pedestrians at First and Santa Clara streets, and the other at employees of the General Electric nuclear group at Curner Avenue and Monterey Highway, were cancelled because of Friday's heavy rain.

Weather

It will be cloudy today with periods of heavy showers. Winds will be westerly at five to 15 mph. Highs will be in the upper 60s with lows in the mid to low 60s. This forecast is provided by the SJSU Meteorology Department.

Everything you ever wanted to know about SJSU instructors is on sale. But the information is priceless.

The Tower List is only $4.95 (Reg. $5.95)
